PAUL SMITH'S, N. Y., July 22 .- The shooting of an owl has frightened the colored manservant of Mrs. Clarence Britton, who has a camp at Osgood Lake, out of the woods. He was sure that the creature that made a noise like that must be a bear and the next morning he no longer answered to roll call. He didn't even wait to draw his wages. Black bears are abroad on the highways of the North Woods, where the berry crop is unusually bountiful. The delicate blueberries and the tender red raspberries glisten among the foliage in great profusion and scores of berry pickers are reaping the best harvest in years. The bears are attracted to the settlements and the

are attracted to the settlements and the open country by the fruit, which forms their principal diet at this season.

Sylvester Newell saw a black bear and cub swim across a bay of the lake the other morning. Another woodsman saw a bear occupying a rock near the river. Then two bears appeared near Ray Brook. Several have been killed in Essex county, where they are not protected by law. Bears have not been seen in such numbers in summer time since the year Mrs. Chandler herself had an experience with them on the Upper Saranac Lake. She was travelling in a guide boat on the lake, not far from her camp, and noticed something ahead in the water. She thought it must be two rocks and spoke to her guide about them. He merely nodded, thinking that Mrs. Chandler must be seeing things, as there were no rocks in that part of the lake.

"Look out!" called Mrs. Chandler. "You'll run over them."

The boat struck something, and the guide turned to find a bear and a cub swimming in the water under the bow of the boat. He was able to kill the cub with an oar, but the bear got away.

he will make a long visit. This is his first vacation in a long time and it is his first experience at golf.

The professionals who are coaching him say that "Pittsburg Phil" shows every promise of making a first class player; they have discovered that he has the right temperament, uses reason, studies, and is willing and anxious. In his first match the other day he defeated Peter Disch, one of his best friends.

There was an interesting match between Americans on one side and Scotchmen on the other on the golf course at Lake Placid the other day. Walter H. Reynolds and George Bouse, American professionals, defeated John Harrison and George D. Keddie, Scotch professionals, in a thirty-six hole match by 3 up.

The sailing yachts of the St. Regis Yacht Club include the jib and mainsail boats, larks, the unrestricted class, the Idem class and catboats, and there are, in addition, about fifty power boats registered at the club. SARATOGA LIVENING UP.

Race Meeting Plans and Some Present Pastimes-Folks Who'll Be There.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., July 28,-Summer visitors, especially those from New York city, always expect Saratoga to have the finest brand of weather on tap when they whirl into town on their outings. This week's conditions would have stocked a meteorological department counter, but they were so nicely arranged that the precipitations and accompanying pyrotechnics were among the night hap penings, leaving the daylight hours clear

Frank R. Hitchcock, who succeeded Frank R. Hitchcock, who succeeded William C. Whitney as president of the Saratoga Association for the Improvement of the Breed of Horses, was to have taken a run up to the track early in the week to inspect the improvements and changes made, but illness kept him at Westbury, L. I. He substituted Thomas Hitchcock and others associated in the management of the track. After a thorough inspection they smilingly expressed their approval of what had been accomplished and decided that "the Saratoga track is the best and most picturesque running park in the world, which was but reiterating a frequent expression of the late President Whitney.

A. McL. Earlocker of New York, the secretary of the association, has installed himself for the turf season in his office in the Worden Hotel block, and is in double telephonic communication with Horse Haven and the rest of the stables. As the annual meeting will begin one week from next Monday, the greatest activity is being displayed in and about the track. Horse trains are arriving daily, and by the latter part of next week there will be enough high bred horses here to equip a regiment of royal hussars. The meeting will end on Aug. 25.

Victor Herbert will come out of the Adirondack wilderness on Thursday and assume for the season the direction of his orchestra, which is filling a summer engagement here. He owns a cottage at Lake Placid, and has been on vacation

President Hitchcock of the Saratoga Racing Association will occupy the Wakeley cottage in Fifth avenue during the August meeting. Jesse Lewisohn has leased for the season the Walter P. Butler cottage in Greenfield avenue. M. L. Hayman of New York has taken possession of the Thaddeus T. Tefft cottage in Philadelphia street. Cottages are still in demand.

The general impression is that both the Republican and the Democratic State conventions will assemble here, a week apart, about mid-September. The Republican date is expected to be September 14, and no better time could be selected, as there will be ample accommodation for all.

Capt. Edward L. Smith, the executive of the Saratoga Polo Club, is whooping up the programme for the national tournsment here, beginning Aug. 24 and ending Aug. 31, for the Hitchcock challenge cup. Besides these there will be two games each week in August for which individual prizes are to be offered. Most of the leading polo players of the country are expected.

Twenty-five hundred members of the Southern Vermont and Northeastern New York Picnic Association of the Modern Woodmen of America will have what they characterize as their "annual log rolling" at Kayaderoes Park, on the sunset shore of Saratoga Lake, on Aug. 6. An address will be delivered by C. G. Saunders of Council Bluffs, Ia.

Automobiles without number are about day and night, and everything else in the line of outdoor diversion seems to give way to this speedy fad. AUTOMOBILING AT RICHFIELD. Long Distance Jaunts and Archery New Fads of Summer Visitors.

RICHFIELD SPRINGS, N. Y., July 23.-Automobiling from New York and Saratoga by way of the Great Western Turnpike from Albany and then up through the Mohawk Valley is a favorite pastime for owners of high power cars. Long before the touring car tooted over that historic highway Richfield was an aristocratic watering place, the rendezvous of fashion watering place, the rendezvous of fashion and the horse, but the "red devils" are none the less welcome because of their modernity. Col. Robert Hilton is keeping three cars on the jaunt. Last Thursday Mr. and Mrs. M. Van Alstyn and Foster Pruyn drove over from Albany. Most of Richfield's outdoor life centres about the Waiontha Hunt and Golf Club. The two organizations enjoy the use of a great country estate to the north of Richfield, owned by Edmund A. Ward. Across the way from the clubhouse is the summer home of Richard Malcolm Montgomery of New York, who encourages brook trout streams, the running of foxes and cross-country paper chases. These sports add to the life of the younger set at Richfield. Mr. Montgomery has 1,200 acres in his estate.

British Ambassador and His Travelled Horse-Recorder Goff Golfing.

LENOX, Mass., July 23. -Sir Mortimer Durand, the British Ambassador, who is spending the summer in Lenox, is an early riser. Every morning at 7 o'clock his Australian saddle horse is brought out for the Ambassador's morning ride over the Berkshire hills. The Ambassador is much attached to this horse. He bought the animal while in Australia on Government service. while in Australia on Government service, and it was trained for his use. When he was transferred to Persia the saddle horse went with Sir Mortimer on the same steamship. Later in India, England, South Africa, and more recently in Washington, the horse has accompanied the Ambassador in his diplomatic career. The animal has probably been in more countries than any other saddle horse living.

Sir Mortimer does not use his official title in Lenox. His calling cards bear the inscription, "Sir Mortimer Durand." Those of Baron Speck von Sternburg, who is also at a Lenox cottage, are inscribed, "Baron Von Sternburg, the German Ambassador."

Recorder John W. Goff of New York has a cottage on Laurel lake called Norwood, after the title of a novel by Henry Ward Beecher. The Recorder rides an oldfashioned bicycle and has recently taken to golf. For some time the natives in Lenox took him to be a farmer, and were greatly surprised when his identity became known by his calling for mail at the post office.

Miss Folsom is giving 5 o'clook teas at the farm to help pay its expenses.

YOUNG MR. WETMORE AS A WAITER Bet He Was Equal to the Atlantic City Article and Won-Rooster Troubles.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 28 .- A novel wager was decided the other night as the result of a discussion ending in the usual "dare you to do it." The bet was won by W. S. Wetmore, son of Senator Wetmore Rhode Island and secretary of the special embassy to the late Queen Victoria's jubilee. The loser was D. Gamble, Jr., of New Haven, who is spending the summer here with his chum.

Mr. Wetmore argued that he could ac as a waiter, do the work as well as an old hand and, if necessary, could earn his living at it. Gamble refused to be convinced and demanded a public demonstration. A café in a big hotel near the broadwalk was se-

Early in the evening Mr. Wetmore presented himself to the headwaiter as a man willing to wait on the tables. As help was needed, the applicant was shown to the locker room and a coat was handed to him. A few minutes later he appeared in the dining room ready to perform his duties. Being well groomed, the new employee was assigned to the care of several small tables not far from the entrance, and in a few minutes a party of five—two men and three women—in evening dress took seats at one of the tables.

Meantime Mr. Gamble had carried out his plans and was seated at a table not far away, but far enough not to be recognized his plans and was seated at a table not far away, but far enough not to be recognized by his friend. Not for a moment did his gaze wander away from his friend. He watched Wetmore carry tray after tray into the dining room. Sometimes the soiled dishes were stacked dangerously high, and Gamble felt sure the waiter would drop some plates on the floor or spill something on some one's clothes.

But there was no cause for worriment. Wetmore performed his duties with precision and tact. He was polite and courteous to all diners. He popped champagne corks and carried mugs of lager just as did the more experienced waiters and wine boys.

At midnight he threw up his job and At midnight he threw up his job and returned the coat to the locker. Then he sought his chum and together they counted the tips he had received. They amounted to $4.30. The money was handed to the real waiters for equal distribution. Gamble was satisfied and both hired rolling chairs and were wheeled to their hotel. Mr. Wetmore retired immediately, declaring that he was very tired. that he was very tired.

A rooster is making trouble in this colony and the owner will probably be haled to the police court before he and the neighbors can come to a peaceful understanding. A New York visitor, who is keeping his name from the public, has a cottage next door to the fowl owner for the summer. He has complained to the police that the rooster begins to crow with all his might regularly at 3 A. M., and demands that the disturbance to his rest be stopped.

disturbance to his rest be stopped.

The possible defendant in a lawsuit avers that he possesses a coop of chickens solely for the purpose of being able to supply fresh eggs to his children, and that the rooster, being the recognized head of the fowl family, has certain privileges, and as father must have his say.

In an open letter the owner of the disturbing fowl asks: "Which is more valuable—fresh eggs for children or sleep to an adult?" The question would be interesting in debate. Meantime the rooster continues his nightly melody, and the visitor is furious.

The steam yacht Haida, dressed in a coat of black, dropped anchor close to the end of Young's ocean pier, and will remain in these waters for a week or so. Her owner, Col. Max C. Fleischmann of Cincinnati, is aboard, with Mr. Harry Stephens as his guest. The Haida came direct from Labrador, where she went on a salmon fishing expedition. She paid a visit to Newport and New York before making this port. Col. Fleischmann, who is an enthusiastic yachtsman, says that while he was in New York harbor he was informed by at least a dozen members of the New York Yacht Club that they would accompany him to this port if the channel was deeper. They had planned a cruise to Atlantic City while the Horse Show was on, but it had to be abandoned on account of the shallow water. The matter of deepening the channel and inlet will be brought up when Congress again assembles. guest. The Haida came direct from

It was postmarked New York. A court of honor was erected for the semi-centen-nial celebration of the resort in June, but no names appear thereon. Grabbing a rude stick, he drew the picture of a horsewoman true to life and labelled it "Mis Sinthi Roch." Nickels, dimes and some quarters began to drop around him so fast that he called upon several boys to help him "pick up de mun."

The absence of Dr. Woodend was the subject of much comment in the clubhouse at the horse show this week, but while the doctor was conspicuous by his absence several of his former horses and gigs sped around the tanbark ring after blue ribbons. The firemen assigned to the grounds were recalling other brave acts that Darby had performed from time to time. Some of the narratives were wildly exaggerated.

WHALE LORE AT EAST MORICHES. Cap'n Zeke Tyler Gives a Lecture on Finbacks to Summer Boarders.

EAST MORICHES, L. I., July 21 .- There was more excitement to-day when four finback whales were sighted a short distance out than the summer visitors had known all season. It was a summer visitor that saw them first.

"Are those bathers, off there?" he asked Cap'n Zeke Tyler, pointing seaward, where white water could be seen a half mile from the beach.
